Mr. Popular: Wall is tops, again, as Canada's favourite premier

Brad Wall attends the grand opening of Cabela's in Saskatoon in May. While busy making legislative decisions and representing the province at the federal level, Wall is also known to be very social — attending as many public events as possible and connecting with people through social media. As Premier Brad Wall meets with potential trade partners in Asia this week, Angus Reid released public-opinion-survey results showing that Wall is once again Canada's most popular premier.

The poll shows that 66 per cent of respondents in Saskatchewan are satisfied with Wall's performance, which is up from 59 per cent last year.

Deputy premier Ken Krawetz said support for Brad Wall is an accurate reflection of what the Saskatchewan people think of their premier.

"It shows his exceptional leadership skills in the province," said Krawetz. "Now that it's been a term of government ... more and more people are recognizing him as a leader."

Saskatoon resident Marty Brown said she thinks the survey is accurate.

"He's good-looking, he's got no scandals so far, and he's energetic ... He's been there for the growth, and so far it's not out of control."

Jon Churko said that the survey results aren't that surprising.

"Saskatchewan is booming more than it ever has in history, and it's mostly due to his policies on corporate taxes and resource management," said Churko.

Terry Skrypnyk said that any politician looks good in a booming economy.

"Most people would like to associate a government with making economies better, but it is usually the other way around," said Skrypnyk.

Wall has been in the top position since 2010, after then-premier of Newfoundland and Labrador Danny Williams retired. Since the poll started, Williams has been the only other premier to receive support from more than half of respondents in their province.

The lowest-ranked premiers this quarter are Christy Clark in British Columbia, with 28 per cent, and Darrell Dexter in Nova Scotia, with 26 per cent.

Saskatoon's largest Jewish congregation finds its rabbi

Spiritual leader. Rabbi Claudio Jodorkovsky was appointed to the Agudas Israel Synagogue after serving in Colombia

MORGAN MODJESKI

After a year of searching, Saskatoon's largest Jewish congregation has found its new rabbi.

Congregation Agudas Israel Synagogue here in Saskatoon recently appointed Rabbi Claudio Jodorkovsky, from Bogota, Colombia, as its new rabbi.

According to Jan Gitlin, media-relations liaison for the congregation, the group is "ecstatic" they found such a suitable spiritual leader during the search.

"It was very comprehensive. We had a few other rabbis who wanted to be in our community and come in for interviews, and rabbi Claudio just fit us well and vice versa," said Gitlin.

"He was searching for a new place for his family, Canada was extremely inviting, our community wowed him and I think it was a love affair both ways."

Rabbi Jodorkovsky echoed Gitlin, saying he saw Saskatoon's congregation as one where he could be in contact with every member, something that's difficult in Bogota, where he has been serving.

"After living for so many years in Colombia, we were looking for a smaller community in a smaller city, as I really believe a rabbi must have close contact with all of his congregation," said Jodorkovsky.

"They are very, very active," he said of the congregation.

"They also understand that being a Jew is to be involved in different types of activities related to the whole community."

Rabbi Jodorkovsky's official installation is Sept. 22, at the Agudas Israel Synagogue.

Queen City hosts national infrastructure summit

John Schubert, national chairman of the Canadian Construction Association, speaks at the 2012 National Infrastructure Summit in Regina. He says municipalities should look at sharing the costs of major infrastructure projects as a way to reduce costs. ROB BROWN/METRO Cities sharing costs of major infrastructure projects is a controversial topic being discussed at the 2012 National Infrastructure Summit hosted in Regina this week.

John Schubert, conference speaker and national chairman of the Canadian Construction Association, said the concept of municipalities sharing infrastructure needs is being examined by cities across Canada.

"It is a bit controversial, but every city doesn't need to own their own water-treatment plant. Many cities do share services already such as fire and police," said Schubert. "It takes the costs of more expensive projects and spreads it amongst a larger tax base."

Election

Province promises cash for community rinks

The Saskatchewan government has come through with one of its election promises to rural areas.

Sports Minister Kevin Doherty says $1.9 million has been earmarked for grants to support community rinks.

Towns and villages can qualify for $2,500 for each ice surface.

The money is meant to help fund operating costs or minor capital upgrades.

Applications must be made online before Nov. 30.

Doherty says the rinks have to be indoor and can't be privately owned or on reserve land.

"The rinks during the winter time ... are the hub of activity in every small community in our province," Doherty said Monday as he announced grant details in Balgonie, east of Regina.

"Whether it's the skating rink or the curling rink, people tend to gather there during all times of the week to partake in figure skating or curling or hockey or what have you."

Feds plan to revoke resident status of application cheats

Immigration fraud. Minister looking to introduce amendments to Citizenship Act as part of multi-year crackdown on cheats

The federal government reprised a familiar get-tough message for immigration cheats Monday, promising to revoke the status of more than 3,100 people it says abused the system in order to claim Canadian citizenship.

Several thousand more are being investigated to determine if they obtained or are maintaining their permanent residence fraudulently, said Immigration Minister Jason Kenney, who was forced to admit only a handful of people have been dealt with so far.

There are 3,139 Canadian citizens currently under investigation for residence fraud, but so far only 19 of them have had their citizenship revoked. That's because the process — part of a long-term crackdown — takes several years, Kenney said.

Letters have been sent to 530 people informing them of the government's intention to revoke their citizenship, he added.

"Canadian citizenship is not for sale," the minister told a news conference.

"We will continue to take strong measures to combat the industry of crooked immigration agents here and abroad who seek to devalue Canadian citizenship by creating fake proof of residency and committing other forms of fraud."

Toronto lawyer Lorne Waldman dismissed Kenney's announcement as old information being warmed over for political purposes.

"It's important that we take measures to eliminate fraud; no one disputes that," Waldman said. "But why is it that we have to continually send out this message?"

Kenney says he is planning to introduce amendments to the Citizenship Act that would require immigration consultants to be members of a regulatory body, which he says may help crack down on crooked agents.

Citizenship and Immigration Canada says a total of nearly 11,000 people have been potentially implicated in lying to apply for citizenship or maintain permanent-residence status. THE CANADIAN PRESS

IAEA demands Iran's co-operation in investigation

Iranian-Canadians rally outside the Department of Foreign Affairs in Ottawa on Monday to support the Canadian government's decision to expel Iranian diplomats from Canada. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The head of the UN nuclear agency made an unusually strong demand Monday for Iran to co-operate with an investigation into suspected secret work on nuclear weapons, expressing his frustration with the lack of headway in the probe.

Yukiya Amano also warned that months of delays were hurting attempts by his International Atomic Energy Agency to look into concerns at one particular site — the Parchin military complex southeast of Tehran, where the IAEA thinks Iran may have experimented with blast tests used to set off a nuclear charge.

"We need to stop going around in circles," Amano said of months of fruitless IAEA-Iran talks aimed at gaining access to the Parchin site and making inroads into agency probes of other alleged nuclear-arms experiments. "This is frustrating."

Asked why there was no progress on the Parchin probe, Amano told reporters: "You'd better ask Iran."

Iran denies any interest in nuclear arms. It dismisses Western accusations that it is enriching uranium to be able to make the fissile core of nuclear arms, saying the process is meant only to produce reactor fuel. And it rejects allegations that it experimented with components of a nuclear weapons program and denied IAEA experts access to sites, documents and officials linked to the work.

Tensions are growing as time drags on, with Israeli officials using the lack of progress in both IAEA and international diplomatic efforts to engage Iran in their argument that there is a need to bomb Iran's nuclear installations.

A music festival to support jailed members of the Russian band Pussy Riot went forward despite official pressure to cancel it, organizers said Monday.

Olga Kurnosova said city officials had tried to force her to stop Sunday's show in St. Petersburg — President Vladimir Putin's hometown — and firefighters had threatened to close down the Glavklub hall, claiming safety violations ahead of the concert.

About 1,000 people attended the "Free Pussy Riot Fest" headlined by the Russian rock protest bands DDT and Televizor, whose songs have long riled Soviet authorities and Putin's Kremlin.

Last month three members of Pussy Riot were sentenced to two years in jail for a "punk prayer" against Putin in Russia's largest cathedral in a trial that provoked an international outcry.

Several younger rock bands and rappers voiced their support for Pussy Riot from the stage Sunday, and some spectators were wearing balaclavas — the feminist band's trademark headwear.

Dozens of riot policemen surrounded the festival venue and detained four people afterward for alleged jaywalking, Russian media reported.

Proceeds from the show will be donated to Pussy Riot and other activists in jail under Putin, organizers said.

Katyn massacre. Files indicate Roosevelt aided Soviets in huge coverup

Two American POWs sent secret coded messages to Washington with news of a Soviet atrocity. In 1943 they saw rows of corpses in an advanced state of decay in the Katyn forest, on the western edge of Russia, proof that the killers could not have been the Nazis who had only recently occupied the area.

The testimony about the massacre of Polish officers might have lessened the tragic fate that befell Poland under the Soviets, some scholars believe. Instead, it vanished into the heart of American government. The long-held suspicion is that President Franklin Delano Roosevelt didn't want to anger Josef Stalin, an ally whom the Americans were counting on to defeat Germany and Japan during World War II.

Documents released Monday lend weight to the belief that suppression within the highest levels of the U.S. government helped cover up Soviet guilt in the killing of some 22,000 Polish officers in 1940.

The most dramatic revelation so far is the evidence of the secret codes sent by the two American POWs — which adds to evidence that the Roosevelt administration knew of the Soviet atrocity early on. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE DAUGHTER WHETHER YOU LIKE IT OR NOT

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

I inherited a number of things from my mother: blue eyes, receding gums, easily tanned skin and an appetite for early-morning cocktails. But while many of my genetic legacies are unavoidable, I've begun to notice that I'm instinctively — although perhaps not knowingly — adopting more and more of her mannerisms. As I get older, I'm starting to look and act like a 2.0 version of my mother.

Earlier this year, Hallmark Cards UK conducted a survey that found women believe they truly turn into their mothers at age 32. And sure, a study performed by a greeting-card company might not be the most scientific poll of all time, but it seems pretty reasonable that the transition would happen around this age. For many women, our early thirties are a prime time for child bearing, rearing and realizing that maybe we should start using night cream.

I've still got a few years until I hit that magical number. At that time, or more likely when I have children of my own, I assume that the metamorphosis from my former self to mom will accelerate to a Kafkaesque top speed.

Unlike some people, I'm not one to make sweeping declarations about "NEVER turning into my mother." My mother has always been someone I have admired, so turning into her would hardly be a bad thing. However, I didn't quite realize how involuntary the transition would be.

We're no Lorelai and Rory Gilmore, but our tastes and habits are increasingly aligning. We drink the same wine, use the same shampoo, and, last month, we unknowingly went shopping on the same day and purchased identical suitcases for a family trip.

I hear her voice inside my head every time I philosophize about the importance of dressing in layers or when I tell my boyfriend to actually look in the fridge before asking me if we have any milk left.

I see it not only in myself but in my friends as well. Kelly is turning into Kathy, and Jen is turning into Janet, and other Jen is turning into Jo Ann (yes, these are real alliteration-loving mother-daughter combos). Of course, none of us are carbon copies of our mothers; we're more like funhouse-mirror reflections.

My mother and I will always have our differences — she will always know more about stain removal than I care to learn, and I will always have to help fix her Facebook privacy settings — but slowly we are meeting in the middle.

What makes a family?

The New Normal. Silly sitcom tackles some touchy topics — here Metro chats with its creator about some of the controversy

AMBER RAY

Metro World News in New York

The New Normal is a goofy, sweet sitcom that questions what “family” means today. The show, which deals with surrogate mothers, gay parents and a big-mouthed grandma who rivals Archie Bunker, has been met with some opposition south of the border.

The conservative group One Million Moms announced a boycott of the show and a ban from a Utah TV station. Here, creator Ryan Murphy addresses some of what has ruffled a few feathers.

The plot

Single mom Goldie (Georgia King) moves to L.A. with her eight-year-old daughter (Bebe Wood) for a better life. There, Goldie becomes the surrogate for a gay couple, Bryan (Andrew Rannells) and David (Justin Bartha), who want to have a baby. Ellen Barkin stars as Goldie's outspoken, prejudiced grandmother, Jane, and NeNe Leakes plays Bryan's assistant, Rocky.

- Air times. The pilot episode of The New Normal aired last night on CTV. Another episode of the show airs tonight.

Cast a (gasp!) Real Housewife in a scripted role

Murphy, a huge fan of the Real Housewives franchise, first cast NeNe Leakes on one of his other shows, Glee.

“We were in the writers’ room of Glee, and we were writing a nemesis for Jane Lynch, and I said, ‘You know what we need? We need somebody like this.’ And I had seen NeNe on Housewives, and I had also seen her take down Star Jones on Celebrity Apprentice. So we had watched that scene, and I said, ‘Wow. I don’t even know if NeNe wants to act, but we should talk to her and offer her this part,’ which was Roz, that she did so well.”

Murphy approached Leakes for the role of Rocky because “she’s just hilarious,” he adds.

Feature a close-minded, no-filter grandma

Nana Jane is a throwback to Archie Bunker — she says shocking, politically incorrect things and isn’t bothered if she offends someone. “(The New Normal) in many ways is about tolerance, and I think it’s about a discussion of tolerance,” Murphy says.

“When I was growing up, one of the most memorable times that I would have with my parents was watching All in the Family and being young and hearing people talk that way and then having a discussion: ‘Was that good? Was that bad? What was that?’ I think people will talk about some things that the (New Normal) characters say, obviously, but I think that’s a good thing.”

Call ‘unconventional’ families ‘normal’

There is no traditional nuclear family in The New Normal, and Murphy credits shows like Modern Family and Will & Grace, which both featured gay characters in committed relationships, for paving the way for his show to reach the air. “So many people watched those shows and are educated. Those shows changed views,” he says.

And while The New Normal is loosely based on Murphy’s own life — “the show came about because my partner and I have been having conversations about surrogacy,” he says — the sitcom also delves into every character reexamining his or her life and asking, “What’s next?”

“We talked about what it was like to be a single mother with a young daughter, what is it like to be a woman in your 50s who is completely starting over and dating again,” Murphy says of Goldie and Jane.

Milla Jovovich. Resident Evil star gets ready for the world’s fashion weeks

She may have a film, Resident Evil: Retribution, coming out this Friday, but Milla Jovovich has a little more than press junkets and promotional tours on her mind. September also marks the start of the Fashion Weeks season in various cities — New York, Milan, Paris, Toronto — and the star has been a front row fixture at many.

Anything in particular you’re looking forward to at the various Fashion Weeks?

I am super-looking forward to going to Paris to see Hedi Slimane’s new Yves Saint Laurent show. It’s going to be super-exciting because I love Hedi and he’s amazing. I mean, to think that he’s designing for Yves Saint Laurent is pretty exciting.

Listen, I’d be in the standing row, I don’t care. I’ve been in the standing row before. You know, I don’t get caught up in front row stuff unless it’s, like, important for the designer. But if I want to go see a show and relate or whatever, I’ll just go and stand. I don’t care. It’s not like people are going to be like, “Oh! Milla wasn’t allowed in the front row. I guess she’s not hot.” It’s all good, I’m confident. I’m 36 and I’m still relevant, so I can stand. I’m not that insecure (laughs).

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

A sneaky wedding for Reynolds and Lively

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Usually, people as famous as Ryan Reynolds and Blake Lively can't go grocery shopping without us snooping around their carts. But somehow, the impossibly pretty couple planned and executed an entire wedding over the weekend without us so much as getting a whiff of cake. (Our guess: They killed off the rare caterer who wasn't hypnotized by their sparkling eyes.)

On Sunday, Reynolds, 35, and Lively, 25, tied the knot just outside of Charleston, S.C. A number of details have finally trickled in — the Reynolds trance doesn't last forever — and it seems they had the kind of understated wedding that really works best when you're overly wealthy: A simple white gown (by Chanel), an outdoor reception (at an antebellum plantation) and music by close friends (Bette Midler and Florence Welch of Florence + The Machine).

It's the second time down the aisle for Reynolds — who divorced Scarlett Johansson in 2010 after two years of marriage — and the first for Lively, who, not to be outdone, briefly dated Leonardo DiCaprio last fall.

Now, we're usually a pretty cynical bunch over here, but we think these two have a real chance. Until those Beckham kids grow up, it's impossible they'll find someone with more perfect bone structure.

Did a political rally ignite this former flame?

Scarlett Johansson turned heads at the Democratic National Convention when she held hands and acted affectionate with former flame Jared Leto, but her rep insists there's nothing fishy going on.

Scissor scare for Cyrus

An unidentified man wielding a pair of scissors reportedly tried to force his way in Miley Cyrus' Los Angeles-area home late at night over the weekend, according to the Associated Press. Luckily, Cyrus wasn't home at the time the man attempted entry, claiming to be a friend of the singer and actress. Police were called by employees inside the house and arrested the man after spotting him jumping behind bushes on the property.

Kristen Stewart will be side-by-side with estranged boyfriend Robert Pattinson to promote the final Twilight film soon, and she swears she isn't stressing out about it. "We're going to be fine. We're going to be totally fine," she tells the Associated Press. We certainly hope they will be, as the studio behind the film is reportedly planning to break records for the largest Hollywood premiere in history for the film's November release.

Are you punk? Hippie? Goth? How your hair will define you

Beauty. Punk=rebel, dreads=hippie, tight bun=uptight. Does our hair define who we are? Experts discuss with Metro

ROMINA MCGUINNNESS
romina.mcguinness@metro.la

When former Disney star Miley Cyrus chopped off her locks last month in favour of a shorter, grungier 'do, she tweeted: "I've never felt more 'me' in my whole life." This led us to wonder, can our hair shape who we are? Here are five ways in which it can.

It adds to your aura. Just ask a guy.

"Many of us believe our figure is the physical feature that defines us. In reality, anything from the neck up is what people see first and remember most," explains beauty psychologist Vivian Diller. "We have a reaction to someone within the first seven seconds of meeting them. As our mind processes what we see, that person's hair becomes a non-verbal expression of health."

Good-bad hair days influence your day-to-day mood swings

"Your body shape can take years to change. Your facial structure is more or less as it is and although you can play around with cosmetics to highlight different things, there's not a whole lot you can do. Hair on the other hand, is one of the few things that's easy to change," Art Markman, professor of psychology at the University of Texas, tells Metro. "You exert this tremendous amount of control over it and in a very short period of time, you can completely change your look."

The changeable nature of hair and its versatility explains how it can influence our mood, he adds.

"Every morning you wake up, look in the mirror and face yourself. At this moment, you have this instant sense of what kind of day you're having, just on the basis of your hair. If you feel like your hair is one big lump and that you'd love to be able to shave it off and burn it, you end up feeling like this tangled mass of hair."

It's a cheap way of making a statement

Feel like dip dying the tips of your hair pink? All you need is a DIY dye kit.

"We have a limited number of ways in which we can project ourselves to the world. Cutting or styling our hair a certain way is both a dramatic thing we can do and relatively speaking, an inexpensive one," explains Markman. "You can try and make a statement by changing the way you dress but

"People generally take 'all' of you in, what wear, your smile, whether your eyes are bright and shiny. But they're also unconsciously clocking your hair and that can influence the way they treat you."

Art Markman
Psychologist

revamping your wardrobe isn't cheap. A high-end haircut is always going to be cheaper than redoing your wardrobe," he points out.

It's an enabler of change (you can believe in)

Your hair can influence how people perceive you, but it can also change your perception of yourself. Diller calls this the feedback loop.

"Change doesn't have to come from the inside. When you look in the mirror, what it is you see feeds back information about who you are and how you feel about yourself. If you have this fantasy of being a completely different you, then changing your hair can enable this change, because ultimately, you are changing what you see. If a haircut makes you look bolder or younger, that's how you will eventually feel. Only then do you need to change how you feel inside, in order to match what you — and others — see."

It allows you to exert control over your life

So many aspects of your appearance are out of your control.

"You wake up in the morning with a huge pimple on your face. You didn't choose to wake up to spotty skin but you have to deal with it. But your hair — that's more or less under your control," says Markman. "You can walk into a stylist and say, 'cut it.'"

According to Markman, the value of our hair rests on the basis that we all need a few things in our life that are 100 per cent ours.

"So many things in our lives are out of our control. We're constantly trying to manage all the forces that are working against us. But no one can tell you what to do with your hair. It belongs to nobody but you."

"This explains why times when people make significant changes in their hair often reflect a situation where the rest of their life felt out of their control, such as a messy divorce or a shift in career. It can also be that after a long period of time where they have let themselves go, they are once again seizing control."

Remember: you can always change what it is you see in the mirror.

Up and Down

HAIR UP

People who wear their hair up tend to be more in control of things and like their life to be perfect. Women (and occasionally, men) wearing this style (a tight bun or high ponytail) often come across as less accessible.

HAIR DOWN

People that let their hair down are instantly thought of as freer souls. You appear more expressive and relaxed, making you more open to meeting new people.

Pineapples and coconut sauce: Tropical take on scallop stir-fry

ROSE REISMAN
for more, visit
rosereisman.com

I prefer buying large scallops for a stir-fry. The key is to not overcook them, or they become dry and chewy.

Make sure to buy light coconut milk, which is much healthier for you than regular coconut milk. Serve over rice or noodles.

1. Make the coconut hoisin sauce by whisking together the coconut milk, hoisin sauce, oyster sauce, peanut butter, cornstarch, garlic, ginger, chili sauce and brown sugar in a small bowl until smooth. Set aside.

2. Lightly coat a nonstick grill pan (or wok) with cooking spray and set over medium-high heat. Add the scallops and sauté until the flesh is opaque and center is slightly translucent, about 3 minutes. Remove from the pan and set aside.

This stir-fry serves four. RYAN SZULC, ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

3. Steam or boil the broccoli for 2 minutes just until tender. Drain well. Respray the pan (or wok) and reduce the heat to medium. Add the broccoli and the red bell pepper and stir-fry for 2 minutes.

Ingredients

Sauce

- 1/2 cup light coconut milk
- 1/4 cup hoisin sauce
- 2 tbsp oyster sauce
- 1 tbsp natural peanut butter
- 1 tsp cornstarch
- 1 1/2 tsp chopped garlic
- 1 tsp finely chopped ginger
- 1 tsp hot chili sauce
- 1 tbsp brown sugar

Stir-fry

- 12 oz large scallops
- 1 1/2 cups chopped broccoli (including stems)
- 2 cups sliced red bell pepper
- 1/2 cup diced pineapple
- 1/4 cup chopped cilantro
- 3 tbsp chopped green onions

4. Add the sauce and scallops and stir-fry for another 2 minutes or until the sauce thickens and all the ingredients are heated through. Transfer to a serving platter and sprinkle with pineapple, cilantro and green onions.

What you don't know about yogurt can hurt you

These days, all you hear about is probiotics. Do you really need them? Do they really affect your health? What happens if you don't have them and what the heck are they anyway?

Probiotics feed the good bacteria in your gut. Good bacteria in your gut breaks down food, synthesizes vitamins, stimulates immunity and kills bad germs. In short, they are crucial.

We are born with a set amount of good bacteria (thank your mom) but poor lifestyle choices, antibiotics and other issues such as weight gain and environment can wreak havoc on these life-sustaining belly buddies. Poor gut flora has been linked to everything from C. difficile to the metabolic syndrome. Trust me, you care.

One of the best ways to build good bacteria is to eat yogurt. The shelves are full of boasting brands.

Here is your cheat sheet of what to look for:

- Gelatin free
- No colourings or flavourings
- Only real fruit added
- As low in sugar as palatable to you
- As fortified in probiotic as high as possible (more than one billion if possible)

The most important key is to choose a flavour that will keep you interested and eating. It doesn't matter how healthy a food is, it won't do you any good sitting in the fridge.

How to deal with an anniversary of your loss

Coping with grief.

Waves of intense emotions are common and there are ways you can prepare for and recover from them

life@metronews.ca

Unhappy anniversary. How do you deal with a date signifying loss?

Whether it's a day of collective grieving such as 9-11 or another day of loss, many people have tough anniversaries on the calendar.

Metro spoke to Toronto psychologist Dr. Kimberly Watson about how to deal with days that mark a disaster, a war, the death of a loved one, a bad diagnosis, an injury, a relationship loss, or a miscarriage.

"Grief has been described to me like coming in waves," says Watson. "With time, the waves come less frequently and less intensely."

Anniversaries may bring back waves of intensified grief.

"People might worry they are not 'over' their grief as much as they had thought. What they may come to understand is that these periodic increases in grief, in response to reminders such as anniversary dates, are a normal part of the process of recovering from loss."

Reactions to an unhappy anniversary might include sadness, sleep disturbance, anger, irritability, dreams, loss of appetite, headaches, and preoccupation with thoughts and memories of the events surrounding the loss. How do you cope? Watson recommends making a plan to get through the day. Honour the loss and feel your feelings.

"It is normal to feel increased distress. It is also normal to smile or laugh. Allow all of it," she says.

Educate your kids about money. Start young. Take time to show them that salmon costs more than a lemon. ISTOCK

ABC's of money can start as early as three

Never too early. Talk to your kids about money, add financial literacy to their learning and they will thank you later

FUN AND FRUGAL
Lesley Scorgie
money@metronews.ca

Summer is officially over and your children are heading back to day-care and school. Now is the perfect time to add financial literacy to their regular routine.

When North American adults were surveyed by CouponCabin.com in August, nearly 75 per cent of them wish they'd received more financial education when they were young. Instead, according to the BMO Retirement Institute's Approach to Retirement, many people learn about money through first-hand experiences (some good some bad) or upon the advice of friends and family members (some are qualified while others are not).

Good thing, nearly 80 per cent of parents these days are motivated to pass along smart money management skills to their children.

Don't worry if you're not financially savvy like Warren Buffett. Talking to your children about money is easy and, in fact, you can start as early as three years old.

Toddlers can learn money basics, like what it looks like and how it feels, by showing them coins and providing a small piggy bank to play with. This is also a great opportunity to teach your children a little bit about numbers; like how four is larger than two and what numbers look like when they're written out. Spend time counting coins with them and perhaps make a craft out of your penny collection.

Take your kids to the grocery store and explain what prices mean and the difference between an expensive item, like a piece of salmon, versus the cost of a lemon. Allow them to pick out their favourite foods and read the prices with them. Show your children how coupons are used and explain why saving money is good for families.

When junior is a bit older, describe what you're doing when you go to the bank or ATM machine. If you pay with a credit card versus cash, explain the difference between the two methods of payment. As early as five years old, put your children on a small allowance. These allowances are critical tools parents can use to demonstrate how to budget and prioritize a child's money. When linked to chores and tasks, allowances convey the lesson of the value of a dollar. Through an allowance, children can begin to demonstrate their OWN ability to plan ahead, use a budget and be accountable for their spending. This is also a great time to open up a bank account.

Let's talk about sex, baby

Poll. We interviewed 2,500 of you about your most intimate secrets. Here's what you revealed (we won't judge).

How often do you have sex?

Look at the person next to you. Wink. Today may be your lucky day: 45 per cent said they get busy weekly, which beat daily (eight per cent) and monthly (12 per cent) for the top spot. Only one per cent have sex yearly, and 12 per cent didn't know or said "it depends," but second place actually went to: "It's been too long since the last time" (17 per cent). Sorry folks. May we introduce you to some virgins (six per cent)?

What's your kink of choice?

You really enjoy your public displays of affection: An overwhelming 42 per cent of survey responders admitted to having sex outdoors or in public. And, while your parents might have told you not to play with your food, now that you're an adult you enjoy playing with your food ... in bed (21 per cent).

Three's never a crowd: 13 per cent of you have dabbled in a ménage à trois. (Are 13 per cent of you lying?)

About 14 per cent have tried the dominant game while 10 per cent have played the submissive, and an especially sexually adventurous four per cent of you have tried on some S&M gear. Playing with candles (four per cent) didn't light your fire as much as playing with butt plugs (nine per cent). And, a select few of you (four per cent) have a few sexy secrets that weren't even mentioned.

Note to the 34 per cent of you who said you weren't kinky: Experiment. If butt plugs are too adventurous, maybe try food in bed — you probably eat there anyway.

What kind of erotica do you enjoy?

About a quarter (27 per cent of you) don't need outside materials to turn you on. But, when it comes to your sexual media, the majority of you head online. Forty-five per cent get excited from videos and web clips, with a small portion of responders preferring to watch sex acts live (four per cent).

Erotic fiction tickles the fancy for 15 per cent, while two per cent of you are hanging on the telephone. About seven per cent of you are lovers of the arts — pornographic photography art, that is.

Why is Fifty Shades of Grey such a big deal?

For the majority of you (10 per cent), you felt the most appealing part of reading the Fifty Shades series was the fact that reading about sex is empowering. However, a lot of you also believed the books had people hooked because it made submissive fantasies more mainstream (eight per cent).

Five percent couldn't ignore that the books' popularity was probably due to the connection to Twilight, while six per cent felt the fantasy series' basis in reality was what made so many people read it.

Three per cent felt that the reason Fifty Shades was so popular was because it was available on ebook to readers, allowing them to peruse steamy scenes anywhere from the four walls of their bedroom to wide-open public transportation.

What fictional characters do you want to see getting hot and heavy?

Light up the Bat-signal: 22 per cent of you want to see Batman and Catwoman get busy. But Marvel heroes Iron Man and Black Widow aren't that far behind (11 per cent). You weren't so interested in seeing Spider-man finally land Gwen Stacy (five per cent).

For you Hunger Games fantasy fiction fans, Katniss and Peeta (three per cent) beat out Katniss and Gale (two per cent). Oddly, Katniss/Gale tied with the desire to see Frodo and Gollum getting it on.

Maybe "Doing the Hobbit" will be the next big sex trend of 2012.

50 SHADES OF RELATIONSHIPS

THERE ARE MANY LESSONS TO BE LEARNED FOR POST-SECONDARY STUDENTS

Living in a new city. The availability of alcohol. Managing life's responsibilities such as cooking and laundry solo.

Those are some of the expected challenges students are working with when starting college or university. But for almost all them, developing relationships and sexuality is another, possibly tougher, lesson to learn about in their post-secondary years.

"The overarching challenge is navigating all kinds of new relationships, which are formed quickly and in an entirely new environment," says Robin R. Milhausen, associate professor with the University of Guelph's Department of Family Relations and Applied Nutrition.

"So negotiating: What does dating look like? What do relationships look like? It's figuring it all out in an entirely new setting."

SEXUAL BOUNDARIES

And in a year where the erotic novel Fifty

ISTOCKPHOTO/THINKSTOCK

Shades of Grey is everywhere, boundary setting is clearly important in developing these new sexual relationships. "People have sex for countless reasons, including pleasure, popularity, coping, pleasing a partner, and the list goes on," says Alice Balter, a Toronto-based sexual health educator. "It's important to explore what our personal sexual boundaries and limits are, especially within the context of a new-found freedom such as living away from home for the first time. Exploring our sexuality warrants thoughtful navigation for students to stay within their personal boundaries and limits."

ADD IN ALCOHOL

And while universities and post-secondary institutions are working on eliminating or minimizing alcohol — particularly in frosh week events (Nova Scotia's Acadia University made headlines last week for banning alcohol in dorm rooms) — when it is available, alcohol also often ignites new sexual experiences. "Individuals should be wary that sexual relationships can develop really quickly under the influence of alcohol. And then there are the emotional concerns and heartbreak with that, but also legal issues regarding sexual encounters with someone under the influence of alcohol or drugs," notes Milhausen.

PLAY IT SAFE

So how can students navigate this exciting time in their lives from a sexual standpoint? Aside from practising safe sex by using protection, go with your instincts. "If something about a situation seems off to you, if something about a person or an invitation or request seems off, then trust your gut in deciding," suggests Milhausen.

Also — rest assured parents — Milhausen also notes that while many students let off steam early in the year, things do get better. "Most students tend to go a little wild at the outset — most of them also tend to right themselves before things go too far," she says. — Astrid Van Den Broek

Andy Murray reacts after winning the U.S. Open final in five gruelling sets on Monday night in New York. MICHAEL HEIMAN/GETTY IMAGES

Murray ends major drought at U.S. Open

Tennis. After blowing two-set lead, 25-year-old Scot recuperates to take title from Djokovic

His considerable lead, and a chance at history, slipping away, Andy Murray dug deep for stamina and mental strength, outlasting Novak Djokovic in a thrilling five-set U.S. Open final Monday.

It had been 76 years since a British man won a Grand Slam singles championship and, at least as far as Murray was concerned, it was well worth the wait.

Ending a nation's long drought, and snapping his own four-final skid in majors, Murray finally pulled through with everything at stake on a Grand Slam stage, shrugging off defending champion Djokovic's comeback bid to win 7-6 (10), 7-5, 2-6, 3-6, 6-2.

"Novak is so, so strong. He fights until the end in every single match," Murray said. "I don't know how I managed to come through in the end."

Yes, Murray already showed he could come up big by winning the gold medal in front of a home crowd at the London Olympics last month. But this was different. This was a Grand Slam tournament, the standard universally used to measure tennis greatness — and the 287th since Britain's Fred Perry won the 1936 U.S. Championships, as the event was known back then.

Murray versus Djokovic was a test of will as much as skill,

By the numbers

No one had blown a two-set lead in the U.S. Open title match since 1949, and Murray was determined not to claim that distinction.

lasting four hours and 54 minutes, tying the record for longest U.S. Open final. The first-set tiebreaker's 22 points set a tournament mark. They repeatedly produced fantastic, tales-in-themselves points, lasting 10, 20, 30, even 55 — yes, 55! — strokes, counting the serve. The crowd gave a standing ovation to salute one majestic, 30-stroke point in the fourth set that ended with Murray's forehand winner as Djokovic fell to the court, slamming on

By the end, Djokovic — who had won eight consecutive five-set matches, including in the semifinals (against Murray) and final (against Rafael Nadal) at the Australian Open in January — was the one looking fragile, trying to catch breathers and doing deep knee bends at the baseline to stretch his aching groin muscles. After getting broken to trail 5-2 in the fifth, Djokovic had his legs massaged by a trainer.

"I really tried my best," Djokovic said.

When Djokovic sent a forehand return long on the final point, Murray crouched and covered his mouth with both hands, as though even he could not believe his moment had actually arrived.

Clock mistake gave Lions extra timeout in opener

St. Louis Rams coach Jeff Fisher says a mistake by the clock operator late in Sunday's last-second loss at Detroit basically gave the Lions an extra timeout that completely changed how the finish played out.

"In essence, Detroit was granted an extra timeout, I guess, if you want to look at it from our perspective," Fisher said Monday.

The league office agreed Monday. It's just a bit of consolation for a team coming off a two-win season that took the Lions to the wire on the road in their opening 27-23 loss.

"What a golden summer it has been for our country," British Prime Minister David Cameron said on Monday. Indeed, London held one final parade a day after the end of the Paralympics to celebrate a sporting summer for the ages.

NHL. Lockout looming with less than week to go

The wheels have already been set in motion.

As the NHL enters the final days under its collective bargaining agreement, both the owners and players have meetings scheduled in New York City where they'll discuss an impending lockout. But unless the sides can find a way to get back to the bargaining table and hammer out an unlikely deal before 11:59 p.m. ET on Saturday, it's a mere formality.

In fact, commissioner Gary Bettman won't even have to make the case for a lockout when the Board of Governors gathers at a Times Square hotel on Thursday afternoon.

The NHLPA is planning its largest gathering since 2005 with more than 250 players slated to attend Wednesday and Thursday.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You are in one of your faultfinding moods and will most likely pick apart everything that other people do. Don't be surprised to find yourself short of friends by the end of the day.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Try not to put yourself under pressure today. Both at home and at work you should aim to relax and not take anything too seriously. And find a way to turn off the constant chatter inside your head.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
No matter how much you might wish to spare someone's feelings, you must be honest with them. What you have to tell them might be a bit hurtful but better a bit of hurt now than a lot of hurt later.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Don't be afraid to lay down the law, either at home or at work. Others will respond well to your leadership qualities and will do whatever you say. Just make sure what you say is what you believe.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Put your ego to one side today and recognize that you don't know it all. It would be foolish to ignore what other people tell you just because you find it hard to accept. You still have much to learn.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Think before you speak, speak before you act, and act only when you have to. Every time before you open your mouth today, ask yourself this question: Will my words hurt or will they heal?

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20
Your life is perfect just as it is, so don't be tempted to change things for the sake of it. Both in your personal life and at work, the right opportunities will arrive at just the right time. Be ready for them.
